which had rewarded their efforts. The stage management was excellent in every respect. The hand of an arist was everywhere visible, the gypsy scenes especially effective. Nothing could have been more effective than the grouping, the background and the side lights in the scene where "Meg Merrilles" first appears. Handwerker's orchestra handled the instrumental portion of the musical feature with even more than their usual feature with even more than their usua success, and the number of good voices in the cast made it possible to present the play as a whole in an excellent manner. Miss Ada Ward sang with skill and ease two exquisite numbers, and Miss Cun-ningham so delighted the audience with ningham so delighted the audience with her rendition of the "Pretty Red Rose," that she was obliged to repeat it. Shields's, "The Wolf" was very well done by Mr. Anderson, and the "Moonlight Serenade," by Mr. Hutton. But perhaps the most taking musical portion of the programme was Bishop's "Chough and Crow," by Miss Montana, Mrs. Hawks, Mr. Anderson and the chorus. Mr. J. R. Baldwin carried off the part of "Guy Mannering" with considerable credit, and Mr. G. D. Hutton again covered himself with glory in the part of "Henry Bertram," for which he was well suited. Mr. B. Of Mrs. Thompson's "Meg Merrilles" it may be said that no reader of Scott could hope to see a more powerful and real personation, so far as appearance is concerned, of this grand and favorite character of the Wizard of the North.
